ABSTRACT

This volume is a compilation of comparative word lists from ten languages--seven Indo-Aryan, one Munda, and two Dravidian--plus English. Three of the languages are from Nepal (Maithili, Tharu, and Dhangar-Kudux); the rest are from India (Kotiya Oriya, Kupia, Halbi, Lamani-Banjara, Hindi, Parengi, and Kolami). The list contains approximately 1700 words. It begins with the 100-word Swadesh list, includes various domains of nouns and attributes, and concludes with a section on verbs. Language families are listed together for ease in comparison. For other volumes in the series, see FL 004 899, FL 004 900, and FL 004 901. (Author/DD)

These volumes are unique in that they are the fruit of cooperation with two institutions--Andhra University in India and Tribhuvan University in Nepal. The Summer Institute of Linguistics was invited by Andhra University to conduct a linguistic workshop on its campus in January and February of 1972. This then was the formal beginning of this four-phase report. The Andhra University campus was especially convenient since several of the languages under study were located in or near Andhra Pradesh.

We wish therefore to express our sincere appreciation to the Vice-Chancellor, Mr. L. Bullayya; the Registrar, Mr. M. Gopalakrishna Reddy; and the Syndicate of Andhra University for their encouragement and co-operation in making this research possible.

Subsequent to the work at Andhra University, the teams travelled back to Nepal where they worked on further compilation and checking under the auspices of Tribhuvan University, Kathmandu. We are deeply grateful to the Vice Chancellor, Dr. T. N. Upraity and Dr. P. R. Sharma, Dean of the Institute of Nepal and Asiatic Studies for their part in making this further work possible.

Dr. Kenneth L. Pike, Project Director, and his wife Evelyn were with us for both the India and Nepal phases of the work and we are deeply indebted to them for providing the original stimulus, as well as continued encouragement and oversight as the work progressed.

We would like to express our hearty thanks to Madeline Troyer for the tedious and painstaking work of typing these lists in photo-ready form. Recognition is also due to Alice Davis for editing the lists for consistency of notation prior to final typing and to Gail Trail for proofreading the final photo-ready copy.

We wish to express our genuine appreciation to Deccan College in Poona, India, under whose auspices general research was carried out in Halbi, Kotia Oriya, Kupia, Lamani-Banjara, and Parengi prior to this workshop. Without this, the present lists would not have been possible.

Finally, we all wish to express our appreciation to the Institute of International Studies, U.S. Office of Education, for making it possible for Dr. and Mrs. Pike and other members of the research team to attend the workshop.

Introduction

A. General.

This is a volume for the comparativist. It is a compilation of ten languages--seven Indo-Aryan, one Munda, and two Dravidian--plus English. Three of the languages--Maithili, Tharu, and Dhangar-Kudux--are from Nepal; the rest--Kotia Oriya, Kupia, Halbi, Lamani-Banjara, Hindi, Parengi, and Kolami--are from India.

The list contains approximately 1700 words. It begins with the 100-word Swadesh list, includes various domains of nouns and attributes, and concludes with a section on verbs. Language families are listed together for ease in comparison. English is listed twice--once on the left of each two-page spread for ease of reference to meaning. Words are grouped into blocks of five to aid the eye in scanning across the page. Where individual languages differ in meaning from English, this is shown by a qualifying note in parentheses following the language entry.

Although phonemic inventories vary, there have been some orthographic conventions which we have regularized for all ten languages. They are:

1) Nasalization of preceding vowel = :
2) Length of vowel = vv (double vowel symbol)
3) ɔ = 6
4) Retroflexion of consonant = C (capital letter)
5) ŋ = ng

Where a single language has phonemes not included in the others, the reader is referred to the phonemic chart for that language included under B. below with its accompanying orthographic conventions.

The terms transitive and intransitive are used in the word list as broad standard classifications, not in their specialized use in the clause papers of Volume II of this report.

The word list used as a basis for this volume was compiled primarily with Tibeto-Burman languages in focus. This has been less than ideal for our three language families and has resulted at times in circumlocutions or blanks.

Another attenuating factor has been the distance between language groups and place of research. The research, although begun in India where most of the languages are located, has been carried out and completed in Nepal. This has made the obtaining and keeping of language assistants quite difficult and has also made thorough checking difficult as well.

B. Specific Languages.

In this section we present a chart of the phonemes for each language in the order in which they occur in the compilation. The credit for the work here presented goes to each author and his or her language assistant(s). The authors of the various lists are as follows:

Kotia Oriya	Uwe Gustafsson
Kupia	R. B. and J. E. Christmas
Halbi	Fran Woods
Lamani-Banjara	Ronald and Gail Trail
Maithili	Jennifer Williams
Chitwan Tharu	Dorothy Leal
Parengi	F. Richard Aze
Dhangar Kudux	Kent H. Gordon
Kolami	Titus L. Naik

Kotia Oriya. Kotia Oriya is an Indo-Aryan language spoken by approximately 12,000 people in the states of Orissa and Andhra Pradesh, India. It is also known as Desia Oriya and functions as the lingua franca of the tribal people in the Araku Valley area. The particular dialect here recorded is spoken in the village of Hattaguda, Araku Valley, Visakhapatnam District, Andhra.

The author is Mr. Uwe Gustafsson of the Summer Institute of Linguistics. Mr. Golori Ram and Mr. Killo Pratap, both native speakers of Kotia Oriya from the village of Hattaguda, served as Language Assistants. Figure 1 is a chart of the phonemes used in the Kotia Oriya word list.

The Kotia Oriya word list deviates from the pattern of the other nine in that simple past, third person singular forms are given in place of the infinitive forms of verbs.

An interesting feature of the Kotia Oriya is the absence of the aspirate series and the very rare occurrence of the h phoneme. Although length occurs, it is rare.

Kupia. Kupia is an Indo-Aryan language also spoken in the states of Orissa and Andhra Pradesh, India. The speakers of Kupia are more popularly known as Valmiki, but prefer to call their language Kupia. It is spoken by about 6000 people. The particular dialect here recorded is spoken in the village of Sujanakota, Munchinput Block, Andhra Pradesh.

The authors are Mr. and Mrs. Ray Christmas, members of the Summer Institute of Linguistics. Mr. G. Kamiswarao and Mr. G. Surayya, both native speakers of Kupia from the village of Sujanakota, served as Language Assistants. Figure 2 below is a chart of the phonemes used in the Kupia word list.

An interesting feature of Kupia is the heavy influence from Dravidian which can be seen in the vocabulary and in the frequent occurrence of the long vowel phonemes. Note that like Kotia Oriya there is no aspirate series, but in addition no h phoneme.

Halbi. Halbi is an Indo-Aryan language spoken in Madhya Pradesh, India. It is the lingua-franca of the Bastar District of that State and is spoken by 300,000 people as their mother tongue. The dialect here recorded is spoken in the village of Bhatpal, Bastar District, Madhya Pradesh.

The author is Miss Fran Woods of the Summer Institute of Linguistics. Mr. Chingaru Ram Murea, Mr. Durga Ram Murea, and Mr. Lula Ram Murea are native speakers of Halbi from the village of Bhatpal and served in the capacity of Language Assistants. Figure 3. Halbi Phonemes.

h occurs after all ten stops in Halbi, but has been analyzed as a cluster of two consonants for economy of description.

Lamani-Banjara. Lamani is an Indo-Aryan language known by several names—Banjara, Lambadi, Lambani, and Singadi to name a few. We have chosen the double appellation of Lamani-Banjara here in an attempt to show the unity of the language by uniting two of its most common names. It is spoken by about 1,500,000 in central India with heaviest population concentrations in Maharashtra, Mysore, and Andhra Pradesh. The dialect here recorded is spoken in Poona, Maharashtra and also in the Gulbarga District of northern Mysore State at Wadi Junction.

The authors are Mr. and Mrs. Ronald L. Trail of the Summer Institute of Linguistics, Nepal. Mr. Hiralal Topaji Chawan whose mother tongue is Lamani served in the capactiy of Language Assistant for the noun and attribute series. The verb entries were those available in the lexicon of A Grammar of Lamani by Ronald L. Trail. This accounts for the incomplete listing of Lamani verbs. Mr. Chawan is from Poona living in a village of Lamans near Yerwada. Figure 4 is a chart of the phonemes used in the Lamani-Banjara word list.

Maithili. Maithili is an Indo-Aryan language spoken in northern Bihar, India, and in the Terai (southern lowlands), Nepal. It is spoken by several million people in both Nepal and India. The dialect here recorded is spoken by the Brahmin people of the village of Ghorghas, Dhanusha District, Janakpur Zone, Nepal.

The author is Miss Jennifer Williams of the Summer Institute of Linguistics, Nepal. Mr. Keshav Thakur, Mr. Shibnandan Mandal, and Mr. Jaya Narayan Jha, all residents of Ghorghas and native speakers of Maithili, served as Language Assistants. Figure 5 is a chart of the phonemes of Maithili.

Maithili is the richest language in this compilation in vowel inventory with the added vowels æ and ɔ.

There are several features to be aware of when reading the Maithili word list. First note that aspiration occurs quite frequently, occurring on m, n, l, and r as well as on the stops. When it occurs it is simply written as h following the consonant; however, a period between a phoneme and h means that the two are separate phonemes. Secondly, because of the limitations of our typewriter, two non-vowel symbols had to be used to indicate vowels—] for ɔ and /i and /u for the glides əi and əu respectively. Thirdly, length occurs on consonants as well as vowels, though what exceptions there are to this is yet to be determined. Finally, the phoneme æ is written as two vowels ae.

Hindi. The Hindi list was taken from the Chhatisgarhi Hindi area without the aid of a definite phonemic analysis. There may be a difference of opinion about the accuracy of the words chosen for a particular

English meaning since there was insufficient time to check the list with any other language assistants. The reader, therefore, is requested to keep these factors in mind before judging it too critically. It is included mainly as a standard of comparison for the Indo-Aryan languages.

Chitwan Tharu. Chitwan Tharu is an Indo-Aryan language spoken in the Chitwan District, Narayani Zone, Nepal. According to the 1971 Census, 24,718 people speak Chitwan Tharu. The name Chitwan Tharu has been chosen to differentiate it from other dialects of Tharu such as Tharu Bhojpuri and Dang Tharu both of which are spoken in other districts of Nepal. The dialect here recorded is spoken in the village of Devauli, Devauli Panchayat, Chitwan District.

The author is Mrs. Dorothy Leal of the Summer Institute of Linguistics, Nepal. Mr. Ram Kissan Rawat, a native speaker of Chitwan Tharu from the village of Devauli, served as Language Assistant. Figure 6 is a chart of the phonemes of Chitwan Tharu.

Note the frequent incidence of aspirated consonants including aspirated ng. Nasalization occurs on all vowels except 6.

Parengi. Parengi or Gorum is a Munda language of the Southern group. This includes Sora (Saora), Gutob (Gadaba), Remo (Bondo), and Gata? (Didey). There are approximately 10,000 speakers of Parengi. The dialect here recorded is spoken in the Koraput District of Orissa and in the Visakhapatnam District of Andhra Pradesh, India.

Glottalization is treated as a prosodic feature of the syllable and is indicated by a ? after the vocalic nucleus of the syllable.

The phonemes in parentheses are the result of Oriya and other loan words and are not therefore pure Parengi phonemes. There is heavy borrowing in Parengi mostly from Oriya. Nasalization of vowels also occurs but is considered to be the result of Oriya influence.

Three other phonemes needing special mention are:

/ỹ/ a voiced nasalized alveo-palatal semi-vocoid (derived from an underlying voiced alveopalatal nasal), symbolized in the Parengi list as y:.

/r̃/ a voiced alveolar trill, symbolized as r.

/ɾ̃/ a voiced alveolar flap, symbolized as r'.

Parengi verb forms differ from the other lists in that stem forms are given in place of infinitive forms.

Kolami. There are two Dravidian languages included in this compilation. The first of these is Kolami, a language spoken in the western side of the Wani Taluka, Yeotmal District, Maharashtra State, India.

The author is Mr. Titus L. Naik from Ruiza, Maharashtra. Mr. G. H. Tekam and Mr. Ukunda Meshram are native speakers of Kolami and served as Language Assistants. Mr. Tekam is from the village of Rohapat, Wani Taluka and Mr. Meshram is from Chaparda, Yeotmal Taluka, Maharashtra. Recognition is also due to Mr. and Mrs. Norman McNair of the Summer Institute of Linguistics who served as consultant and typist for the Word List. Figure 8 is a chart of the phonemes of Kolami.

In the Kolami word list /ʃ/ is symbolized as sh. Note also the lack of nasalized vowels.

Dhangar-Kudux. Dhangar-Kudux is the second Dravidian language in this compilation. It is unique in that it is spoken in Nepal! It is a dialect of the Kudux of India. The particular dialect here recorded is spoken by about 10,000 people living in the Dhanusa District of southern Nepal.

The author is Mr. Kent H. Gordon of the Summer Institute of Linguistics. Mr. Saukhi Lal Prasad Uraon, Mr. Banthu Uraon, Mr. Ram Prasad Uraon, and Mr. Shib Kumar Das Uraon served as Language Assistants. Figure 9 is a chart of the phonemes of Dhangar-Kudux.

Note that like Maithili and Chitwan Tharu (both languages of southern Nepal) there is a high incidence of aspirated consonants. Note also the occurrence of x, a voiceless velar fricative unique to Dhangar-Kudux

It appears to contrast with consonant doubling which has an optional open transition between the consonants. Gemination has no such transition. b also occurs but only as a learned pronunciation.
